He said:

"There need fall from my lips this afternoon neither the assurance that the honorable body that it is my privilege to represent, the state senate, is fully one with this house in mourning the loss of one of its members, nor the fact that it is unnecessary to make any eulogy for these lives that have been so suddenly taken away: for they have in the excellence of their character, the nobility of their manhood, the loftiness of their life principal, manifested to all who came near them and felt the power of their personality, that divineness which God has planted in the human soul. INDIAN FIGHTERS REVIVE OLD MEMORIES AT REUNION OF SALT LAKE DIVISION

Many Indian war veterans and their friends answered last night the call of the annual reunion of the Salt Lake division of the old warriors in Armory hall and until a late hour enjoyed in becoming manner the pleasures to which the occasion was dedicated. Over 200 people participated in the reunion, among which tumber were, besides the veterans themselves, Governor John C. Cutler, a score or more of visiting veterans from towns and cities throughout the state and a goodly representation of the younger generation.

The entertainment opened with a grand march, headed by the governor, and from that time until the close of the evening a general good time was in order. Among the dances enjoyed were the quadrille. Money musk, Virginia reel, Scotch reel and step dancing done by the veterans, principal annong whom was Captain Thomas Dobson. It was an old-fashioned gathering and old-fashioned dances and

Thankful for Two Things.

Thankful for Two Things.

"I am glad for two things in this sad hour, because, firstly, two fretted hearts have done with life's burden, and because as we come to drop a tear for the memory of these men, there is the voice of the living God speaking through death to us of life's work and duties and responsibilities. It is well for us that amid the calls of state to which you are giving your lives, amid the petty things of the days that babble about us, there may be sounded again the measure of that truth God has been speaking to the hearts of men through all the age. The recollection that death, whose shadow is here today, is not only the warder of the past who brings to us the rich heritage of him with whom we have to do, and to whom is all of life's responsibility, should impress our hearts with the lesson of the hour.

Death Bounds Ambition.

Death Bounds Ambition.

"Death waits for all to set the bounds of human ambition, whether it be for the dullard, who is satisfied to live as the beast, finding his satisfaction in the base things of time, or for him whose soil is touched with the fire Olympian, who, walking in the halls of history, finding there only broken memories of those whose life has made the glory of the past, is fired with a thought that had burned —the passion of men in the age to leave behind some enduring monument. Alas, in tha moment when before his vision his dream takes form, it dims and dies in a sorrowing mist of tears.

"We are here to speak tenderly of those who have gone, to express our sympathy for those who are bereaved and no less to be purified by the voice that speaks in this hour and to go out under the influence of its message to the life.
